When Reptiles Die.

Reptiles rarely die in the daylight—usually between nightfall and midnight. Many of them have an instinctive prescience of death and seek particular places to await the end, while those whose lives are spent underground come to the surface before death. Snakes, chameleons, crocodiles and turtles plainly show in their faces the approach of death.—Fall Mall Gazette.

The American Indian.

Students of the Indian tell us that while the numbers of the red men are diminishing there is a slow amalgamation of the tribes wherever their geographical location makes this possible. It is supposed that there were 1,000,000 Indians on this continent when the Europeans settled here. It is estimated that the present population is 50,000 less.

CONSERVATION OF CHILDREN'S SIGHT

Day For Urging Study of Vision Saving Urged in Educational Meeting.

San Francisco, Cal., July 12.—A conservation of vision day when the care of the eyes will form the subject of consideration in the schools and public assemblies throughout the United States was proposed by Dr. F. Park Lewis, of Buffalo, in an address today, before the department of special education of the National Educational association. This suggestion was made in order that thought may be fixed upon the subject, and the public enlightened as to the necessity. A certain day in the fall of 1912 as a conservation of vision day was suggested. In his address, Dr. Lewis said in part: "The children of the country are its most valuable resources. To the extent that their efficiency is developed, and their productivity increased, will the standard of civilization be raised. The most valuable single asset in their effectiveness is their eyesight, and this is in a large proportion of cases needlessly sacrificed. One-third of all blindness is preventable, and a much larger proportion of people with defective vision need never have suffered this handicap had right protective measures been employed.

"A movement is under way to coordinate the efforts of the teachers, the doctors, the social workers, the sanitarians, the architects, the eliminating engineers, the mothers and the public generally in making more widely understood and carrying into effect the principles of the hygiene of vision. This is being developed through the American association for the conservation of vision, which included in its active membership many of the most distinguished scientists in the country. "It is proposed, and this work has already been begun, to issue publications under the authority of specialists, in the various departments. These will include studies in the proper lighting of schools—the best form of type and paper to be employed—and more especially the lessening of the hours of eye work. It will consider, also methods of protecting the eyes from needless accidents. These causes, contributing so largely to defective eyesight, are largely governable."

Public School Music. The keynote sounded in a paper by Miss Elsie M. Shawe, of St. Paul, Minn., president of the music department of the National Educational association, at a section meeting of the association today on "Public School Music in Relation to the Music of the Community." was that public school music is one of the largest factors in the making of America a musical nation.

Civic Depravity. "Civic depravity" was denounced by Richard Wellings, of New York, one of the speakers at a section meeting of the National Educational association today. His subject was "Pupil Self Government as a Training for Citizenship."

"Eight years ago, I addressed this association on Training for Citizenship, in the schools. We were then at the beginning of a wave of civic righteousness which passed over the country. I say 'passed over' advisedly, because there seems to have been a lapse into the lethargy of the older days as is evidenced by the conditions in many places.

"The vote selling in Ohio, Indiana, and my own state of New York indicate not merely a low tone of citizenship but a civic depravity. The Lorimer case gives a clue to the lack of intelligent interest of the citizens of Illinois in the selection of their public servants."

A bad taste in the mouth comes from a disordered stomach, and back of that is usually a torpid liver. A condition which invites disease. HERBINE is the remedy needed. It corrects the stomach and makes the liver active and regular. Price 50c. Sold by Scott White & Co., 204 Mills, and Depot Pharmacy.
